GOVERNMENT STORM SIGNALS.

The Baltimore Station.

The Baltimore Station.

[From the Baltimore Sun, Dec. 31.]

A meteorological observatory is ordered to be opened in this city by Brevet Brigadler General A. J. Meyer, the Chief Signal Officer of the United States Army, on to-morrow morning, January 1, 1871. Baltimore is one of the forty-five stations established throughout the country under act of Congress, providing for the observation and report of storms by telegraph and signal, "for the benefit of commerce on the Northern lakes and seaboard." The observer, Mr. James E. Cowan, stationed at this point, under Lieutemant H. W. Howgate, U. S. A., and whose office is at the corner of South and Water streets, has been instructed to give proper streets, has been instructed to give proper publicity to these renorts by publication in the papers and bulletins in the Board of Trade rooms, Merchants' Exchange or other conspicuous places, immediately upon their receipt. The whole time required to transmit and deliver the reports from the extreme points of publication will, it is hoped, not exceed one hour. It has been in view to so locate the stations throughout the country that, the existence of a storm at one or more of them being determined, information may be telegraphed in advance of its probable movement. Considering the large commercial interests of this country, it has been rather slow in organizing a system of storm warnings such as has been generally adopted in those European countries most interested in maritime affairs. The honor of having been the first to put in operation a practical system of weather forecasts belongs to the late Admiral Fitzroy, of the British navy.

The first cautionary signals were made in England maritime anairs. The honor of having been the first to put in operation a practical system of weather forecasts belongs to the late Admiral Fitzroy, of the British navy.

The first cantionary signals were made in England in February, 1861, and were tried with such success that by the spring of 1862 sufficient experience had been gained to justify the adoption of the system. France, Italy, Russia, Austria Germany, Denmark, Holland and Norway have all adopted a similar practice. In Austria alone there are 118 stations where scientific men take observations without remuneration. It has been found that by telegraphing in advance the existence and progress of a storm vessels in the scaports have had time to provide, and have provided, against its violence, so that they were ready when the storm came to meet an emergency which otherwise might have involved great damage and perhaps destruction. The fact that in the north temperate zone storms almost invariably come from some westerly point, and follow an easterly course, renders the application of storm warnings in the United States of more immediate unlity than in Europe, where the principal points, being on the eastern coast, are first affected by the storms. Even a few hours' notice of the approach of the great storms gives time to escape great calamities, whereas the rate of thirty-six to forty-four miles perhour affords much more opportunity for preparation. Fast as the wind travels the telegraph travels a good deal faster. The regular reports begin at thirty-seven minutes past seven o'clock A. M. to-motrow.

THE WEATHER OY LONG ISLAND.

Snow and Snow-bound Trains [From the Sag Harbor Corrector, Dec. 31.]
Eighteen hundred and seventy determined to give us a dual touch of its temper before passing out of sight in the corridors of Time. The Old Acar meant us a dual touch of its temper before passing out of sight in the corridors of Time. The old Acar meant to crown itself with something else beside the metaphorical frosts of age, and gave us a practical old-fashioned snow storm to envelop its departing form. Wednesday afternoon and Thursday all day, until sun-setting, the flakes fell thick and last, and about eight inches of snow on the average laid on the ground on this end of the Island. Wednesday evening the wather softened, and at nine o'clock the thiawing snow was dropping from the caves of the houses; but shortly alterwards the wind shifted more to the eastward. It came off colder, and all day Thursday snow fell. The thermometer at nine A. M. Priday morning indicated fourteen degrees above zero.

The freight and passenger train on the branch road left here together about ten A. M. Thursday, but were stopped in a heavy drift in the cut in Shinnecock Hills about one mile from Canoe Place. Here, after getting out of wood and water, it became necessary to abandon the trains. There was no snow plow on this branch of the road, or the results might have been different. This is the heaviest cut on the road, and one probably mest liable to obstructions from storms. Assistance was telegraphed for to Hunter's Point, and Mr. Barton, Superintendent of the road, came down yesterday. It will probably take two extra engines and a snow plow to extricate the snow-bound train. To get stuck fast on Shinnecock Hills is equivalent to shipwreet on the desert of Sanara. Wood and coal are both wanting.

On Thursday also we failed to get the New York mail, the contractor leaving Greenport before the arrival of the mail train, which was two hours behind time. The evening train for Greenport got through about fifteen minutes behind time.

The sleighing was excellent between this place and Buil Head. West of there some bare spots were gound.
